Tank Integrity Testing Services has been acquired by the Vertech Group, making it a full partner as from March 2020.

The announcement was made today jointly by Vertech Group Managing Director, Tom Brennan, and Tank Integrity Testing Services Managing Director, Don Edmondson, after the deal was finalised on the 10th of March.

Mr Brennan said that the Vertech Group was excited to have Don and his team be part of the Vertech Group family.

“The care for their people, the passion shown for providing high-quality inspections and their absolute customer focus is what I felt set this business apart,” stated Mr Brennan.

“I’m excited to have Don and his team come on board and look forward to a prosperous journey together over the coming years”.

Managing Director, Don Edmondson, founded Tank Integrity Testing Services in 2016 with a focus upon providing flexible, high-quality inspection services to the petrochemical industry.

“We are extremely excited to be entering into this new partnership and look forward to the future growth of the group as a whole,” said Mr Edmondson.

“This will give us access to a larger pool of resources, especially the cutting edge inspection technology that Sonomatic can provide.”

Tank Integrity Testing Services will continue to operate across the whole of Australia, PNG and New Zealand specialising in API 510, 570 & 653 Inspections and Non-Destructive Testing, along with materials engineering, welding engineering and mechanical engineering to enable turn-key solutions for its customers.
